Importance of Connection

Your friend laughs at your joke. Your co-worker offers congratulations on landing that big account. Your spouse kisses you goodbye.

They are all helping you bust stress and boost happiness.

Social connection not only improves psychological well-being it also improves your health.

One recent study showed that lack of social connection is a greater detriment to health than obesity, smoking and high blood pressure.

Conversely, strong social connection leads to a 50% increased chance of longevity. Now learn the keys to increasing connection, health, and happiness in this dynamic session.

What People Say

Professor Lalage Bown OBE

University of Glasgow,
United Kingdom

"Hannah makes frequent public appearances to speak about a variety of topics, including black history, cultural heritage, personal development, and the Christian faith. She integrates personal anecdotes, historical accounts, and visual media to create riveting, inspirational speeches for each new event.

Hannah is the real didactic person who tells interesting stories with teaching and a message behind it."

Dag Saunders

NHS manager and magistrate,
England

"Hannah Adjepong is one of those larger-than-life figures who can change the lives of those they meet, her enthusiasm for recognising how children need to develop and how they can be helped shines through and will be an inspiration to many."

Darshana Ubl

Co-Founder of Mayfair Silk and Verve Rally,
London

"In a world where imagination and creativity are stifled, Hannah Adjepong is a breath of fresh air. Always inspiring she has a gift for storytelling and encourages her friends and colleagues to document their life stories.

She shares her passion for creating a legacy and making a difference in the world. I've had Hannah go through my TEDx speech and bring it alive - and the warmth of her friendship is something that I treasure greatly."

Daniel Blasczyk

Enrichment Coordinator, Telford College of Arts and Technology, England

"Hannah's talks on Black history were insightful and inspiring. Before Hannah's talk, some students took their life skills for granted. She made the students think about immigration and life skills in a different way. She also educated students on significant parts of Black history and where certain parts of our unsavoury language have stemmed from.

Students realised that using positive words created a safe environment for learning. She encouraged students to read, research and start to write their family history. She has a warm and engaging presence through delivery. Would highly recommend her services."
